

INTRAS is a nonprofit organization dedicated to research, treatment and social services for people suffering from mental illness. It was established in 1994 from an initiative of a group of professionals from different fields (psychiatry, new technologies, social services) that sought to develop services and intervention programmes for people at risk of social exclusion or those with special social and health needs. It operates nationally, with greater intensity in Castile and León, particularly in the provinces of Valladolid, Zamora and Salamanca. INTRAS Foundation has a Department of Research, Development and Innovation, dedicated to the evaluation and creation of new technology programs in the field of neuropsychological intervention in order to promote quality of social and health care assistance (program Grador). www.intras.es
